THE TRIBUNE has not now its character to make or to proclaim. It has not been and never can be a mere party organ. It has supported the Whis party because the distinctive principles of that party appeared to lavor the great ends which it has labored to subserve; it answer advocated a measure because; it was proposed or sustained by the Whis party. It holds their at all times as free to condemn arsound principles, unwise measures or corrupt axis should the two former be propounded or the latter perpetrated by Whigs as though they had emanated from the hostile camp. Were it able to perceive that a vote in New-York could abollat Slavery in Carolina, it might attack itself to some one of the expressive Auti-Slavery parties; lecking that light, it declines to shadon the substance for the shalow of political good. But, while it does not see, its way clear to say define its little as even against Slavery in the Slaver which new cherish it, it regards the defeat of whetever effort to extend the giant wrong under the Fing of our fullen, or to obstruct by its power the progress of Abolition in other lands as among the most urgent and sacred of public duries, not to be subordinated to any party consideration whatever.
